Usibelli Coal Mine — Generations of support

Usibelli Coal Mine (UCM)

Usibelli Coal Mine (UCM) is a 1,000-acre coal mine in the Allegheny region of Pennsylvania. It is one of the largest coal mines in the state and has been a major source of coal for the region since its opening in 1964.

UCM has a long history of community support and philanthropy. In 1964, the mine established the Usibelli Coal Mine Foundation, which has since supported a wide range of community programs and initiatives. The foundation has provided financial support for the construction of schools, libraries, and community centers, as well as for a variety of social and educational programs. In addition, the foundation has supported a number of charitable organizations, including the Allegheny County Historical Society, the Allegheny County Historical Foundation, and the Allegheny County Historical Society. The foundation's support has helped to improve the quality of life in the Allegheny region and has provided a significant source of funding for a wide range of community programs and initiatives.
